I was part of the team that made it to the semifinals. We did not expect that we would advance to the semifinals, considering our very minimal preparation and our competitors from high-level schools from all over Indonesia. My contribution to the team is answering questions in physics, mathematics, and industrial theory.

Please write a short essay from one of the following options (remember to indicate which options your essay will be based on by clicking the bullet button next to it):

- ☒ c. Describe, in less than 300 words, a short essay on a subject of personal importance to you. You may choose any topic. Examples include: an event which has influenced you or a family member/friend/person who had a significant influence on you.

I've always believed that whoever we socialize with will affect our behavior. This may seem silly but the bigger the friend circle is, the more I believe in this. Ever since middle school, I've always been the type of person who's lazy and loves to play. By the time I entered high school, I've met friends who I thought were exactly like me. I was surprised when I knew that my mid-semester exam results were the lowest among us. They have never studied seriously but somehow were able to achieve fairly high results. It was then when I realized that they were able to play hard because they worked hard. They were able to balance their time studying and socializing with others. I can't always be lazy and get left behind by my friends so I learned to prioritize my responsibilities first. It was absolutely hard at first because I was so used to playing around but it all paid off when my results increased a lot in the following semester. Even though my friends didn't tell me to change right directly, their behaviour and how they acted gave me the motivation to become a better version of myself.
